ABOUT PROTECTING KIDS
ONLINE

Our kids are growing up in a digital world. Children and teens are on their phones and laptops nonstop. But all that screen time could be putting any child at risk. Online, it's harder to tell if people are really who they say they are. It's our job to help kids recognize who their real friends are – and aren't.

ABOUT WHAT YOU DO
ONLINE

We all know the internet can be an awesome place. But, just like IRL, there can be some creeps out there who can make it a very dangerous place for kids and teens. It's important to be educated and empowered so you know how to protect yourself and your friends.

WHAT

Developed by the McCain Institute & Ketchum, R.E.A.L. Friends Don't increases awareness while educating parents and caregivers about online safety. The program has evolved to empower parents to protect their children from harmful content, grooming or online exploitation and inform kids about what to do if they find themselves needing help.

HOW

Reaching over two million internet users around the world since its launch in December 2020, the campaign, offered in both Spanish and English, continues to provide caregivers and kids with comprehensive resources and actionable support.

Building trust through relatable Design

Specific symbols and language help us empower both parents and caregivers on their terms.

Color, imagery, language choice are critical to creating art that connects with the right audiences in the right ways. Through our community art program we aim to empower prevention through engaging parents/caregivers and teens to develop art that takes our messaging and makes it most meaningful to them.

These can be portrayed through traditional murals, augmented with technology and deployed where audiences gather in a portable way.

Who we are

The McCain Institute is working to make a difference in people's lives across a range of critical areas including combatting human trafficking and exploitation.

Online exploitation of children and teens is one entry point for human trafficking. That's why we're helping parents and caregivers recognize the risks and the steps to take to keep their kids safe. It's part of our Combatting Human Trafficking program, aiming to educate, raise awareness and implement action-based solutions to end modern slavery in the U.S. and abroad.
